COMMITTED TO THE NATIONAL COUNCIL’S DECISION OF 14/9/2009

PRESIDENT ANASTASIADES: “2016 could be the year to get rid of the occupation”

President Nicos Anastasiades addressed the public in a televised message to usher in the New Year, wishing that the year 2016 could be the year that would lead to the reunification of the island.

Addressing his compatriots, both Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots, Anastasiades conveyed his wholehearted wishes on the occasion of the New Year, “in a free and reunified homeland, in a modern state that will guarantee stability, human rights, peace and prosperity for its citizens”.

“Without intending to create unrealistic expectations, I believe that 2016 could be the year that will end the unacceptable situation that prevails today to get rid of the occupation and reunite our homeland”, the President said.

Anastasiades said the intensive talks that resumed in May 2015 aim to reach a solution that will make the Republic of Cyprus into a bizonal, bi-communal, modern European state that will respect human rights of all citizens and its sovereignty will not be disputed by the existence of anachronistic intervention rights from any third country.

“The dialogue up until now has covered all chapters related to the Cyprus problem, and there is common understanding on many issues but also differences on other significant issues”, he added.

Addressing Greek Cypriots, the President said that in order to achieve the goals that were set over time, there should be consistency and commitment to what at times the political leadership has adopted through high level agreements or achieved through UN resolutions and decisions of the Security Council. He pointed out that “deviation from what was agreed from the unanimous decisions of the National Council, not only runs the risk of perpetuating the deadlock but also deteriorates the conditions in a future claim for a settlement based on what we today rely upon international law and the acquis communautaire”.

“I want to assure you that I am determined tirelessly to continue negotiations on the basis of the unanimous National Council decision of 11 September 2009. And this is because I believe that only a solution on the basis of the above principles can ensure a future with security, peaceful coexistence and prospect for new generations to follow” he said.

Addressing Turkish Cypriots, Anastasiades assured them that he doesn’t disregard their concerns, adding that the solution basis agreed neutralises decisively any concerns that rightly or wrongly are reduced to the past.

He noted that safeguarding human rights, basic freedoms and the effective operation of the state in a European Union context is the best guarantee for a secure future. The President also touched on foreign policy, the economy, and reforms. He praised efforts to boost bilateral relations with other countries, pointed out new important sectors for development, and announced new measures for more efficient government, including better schools and healthcare.

Anastasiades also said that his quest is not a solution that will create winners and losers.

“I hope that 2016 will be the year that we celebrate together the restoration of peace in our homeland”, Anastasiades said.

Two UN reports to be issued on Cyprus

Two separate reports will be issued on Cyprus at the United Nations, one on the renewal of UNFICYP’s mandate and the second on the Secretary General’s Good Offices mission.

The report on the UN peace-keeping force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) will be issued before the date set out in the last UN resolution, which is January 30. The report on the good offices mission does not have a deadline but it is estimated that it will be presented to the members of the Council before the draft resolution on the renewal of UNFICYP’s mandate.

According to diplomatic sources, UN Special Adviser Espen Barth Eide had asked for a separate report on the Good Offices mission.

Regarding the report on UNFICYP, diplomatic sources talked about assurances that it will not contain any surprises. The Security Council will be briefed by Eide around 26-27 January. In Resolution 2234 on UNFICYP dated July 29, the Security Council encourages the sides to grasp the current opportunity with determination to secure a comprehensive settlement and calls upon the two leaders to put their efforts behind further work on reaching convergences on the core issues.

The UN peace-keeping force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) is one of the longest serving UN peace-keeping forces, arrived on the island in March 1964 when intercommunal strife broke out.

Since then, its mandate has been modified to meet the circumstances on the ground, in particular after the 1974 Turkish invasion, which resulted into the division of the country.

Several countries contribute to UNFICYP personnel, which numbers around 1,000. The mandate of the force is renewed every six months.

More than two thirds of Greek Cypriots do not see a solution in 2016

According to a poll published on Sunday, 65% of Greek Cypriots do not believe there will be a Cyprus solution in 2016 compared to 35% who believe there will be one.

The island wide poll was commissioned by “Siemiria” newspaper and carried out by the University of Nicosia and IMR on December 29 and 30.

According to the results, 51% of respondents were satisfied or somewhat satisfied with President Nicos Anastasiades’ handling of the Cyprus issue compared to 48% who were dissatisfied or somewhat dissatisfied.

For Turkish Cypriot leader Mustafa Akinci, 64% of Greek Cypriots were dissatisfied or somewhat dissatisfied with his stance compared to 26% who were satisfied or somewhat satisfied with him. UN Special Adviser Espen Barth Eide fared even worse with a 64% disapproval rating and a 27% approval rating.

The government’s disapproval rating overall was 55% in the poll while parliament received a 68 per cent disapproval rating, and the Church 45%.

Almost 40% were dissatisfied with the state of education, 56% with the state of the health sector, and 73% with the situation at the banks, particularly non-performing loans and foreclosures. Regarding justice, 53% said they were dissatisfied with the justice system and 65% with the level of corruption.

Almost 50% of those polled did not foresee an improvement in the economy this year compared to 42% who did. Some 57% did not see their quality of life improving in 2020 but 45% did.

Top of the list of New Year wishes was good health for 36% of those polled, followed by a Cyprus solution for 18%, and a reduction in unemployment for 11%.

Overseas ballot centres for Cyprus parliamentary elections

The central election service on Monday announced that overseas ballot centres for eligible voters will be in operation for Cyprus’ parliamentary elections on May 22.

Eligible to vote are overseas Cypriots who are already registered with the Republic’s electoral roll and those that will get registered by April 2-4, the latest.

New voters should fill in a special application available at embassies/consulates of the Republic in Greece and Britain and at local district offices and citizens service centres or the Interior Ministry’s website (www.moi.gov.cy).

Because the law provides that operation of electoral centers abroad means that over 30 voters are registered for every district, voting is - so far – expected to take place in Athens, Salonica, Patsa, London and Manchester – just like in 2011’s election.

Anachronistic guarantees need to end, say Cyprus and Greece

It is better to work for a Cyprus solution, instead of just talking about it, Greek Alternate Minister of National Defence Dimitris Vitsas has said. Speaking in Nicosia, where he paid a three-day official visit to Cyprus last week, Vitsas appeared certain that the solution will be a successful one and for the interest of Cypriot people.

The Greek official met with Defence Minister Christoforos Fokaidis (photo) and the two men reiterated the position of Nicosia and Athens in favor of terminating the anachronistic 1960 status quo.

“Our steadfast and common goal is the Republic of Cyprus to terminate Turkey’s occupation and reach a comprehensive, national and internationally acceptable solution, on the basis of UN resolutions and Cyprus’ EU membership” Vitsas said after the meeting.

He noted that Athens lends full support to bicultural talks but has no reason, whatsoever, to intervene in these negotiations. Greece supports the effort of the Cypriot government and of the Republic of Cyprus, Vitsas added.

The Alternate Minister also noted that “a viable solution to the Cyprus problem is unthinkable without the withdrawal of all occupation troops and without the abolition of the anachronistic 1960 system of guarantees”, which Ankara is expected to assume a constructive stance and contribute to the efforts for a settlement.

Greece’s Central Bank chief, Yannis Stournaras, has urged the leftist-led government to implement bailout reforms agreed with the country’s lenders, warning that backing away would entail risks the economy could not withstand.

Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras’ ruling coalition, which has a majority of just three seats in parliament, faces tough pension reforms that will test the resolve to carry out measures demanded by international creditors.

Reforming the country’s ailing pension system is a prerequisite for the first review of Greece’s 157 billion (€5.5 billion) bailout agreement in July last year.

“The successful completion of the programme’s first review is certain to have a very positive impact on confidence. It is key for the return of deposits to the banking system,” Bank of Greece Governor Yannis Stournaras wrote in an article in Sunday’s edition of Kathimerini newspaper.

“A potential failure in completing the review would be destabilising, bringing to memory the experience of the first half of 2015. A repeat of that experience entails large risks, difficult for the economy to withstand this time,”

Tsirakos said that for the Greek economy and for the eurozone of which it is a part, dealing with the eurozone would entail risks the Cypriot government was not willing to take any risks.

“Irrespective of the outcome of this review, the implementation of the agreed programme and the implementation of the necessary reforms will be the main priority for both the government and the Cypriot community,” he added.

Tsirakos said that “the Cypriot government is committed to ensuring that the programme and the reforms will be successfully completed.”

STOURNARIAS: Greece “must implement bailout reforms”

The Greek official said finally that there is room for further cooperation on defense industry matters and said that both countries have the potential to become agents of stability in the region.

“There is no room for anachronistic guarantor systems, nor can a modern state and in particular an EU member state, be under the tutelage of guarantors or guardians” said Christos Fokaidis from his part.

He noted that he briefed the Greeks on the latest developments in the Cyprus issue and on efforts to reach a viable and functional solution, that will terminate Turkish occupation in Cyprus and reunify the country.

According to the Minister, during the meeting, the two sides confirmed that “Cyprus and Greece remain basic pillars of stability and security in the wider region”.

During their “cordial and productive” meeting, Fokaidis said that they took stock of geopolitical conditions in the region and of developments in relation to the refugee crisis, terrorism and geopolitical volatility.

They also reviewed efforts for the continuous enhancement of bilateral relations, under the lens of the latest security developments.

“Our defense cooperation is, in any case, intertwined with the effort to promote peace, security, and respect for international law” the Minister of Defence concluded.

Dinos Michaelides released by Greek authorities

Former Cypriot interior minister Dinos Michaelides, convicted for bribery in Greece last year, was released on Wednesday 30th of December from jail early on health grounds.

Michaelides is the only convicted of serving over 10 months of his 15-year prison sentence.

“I am breathing free air,” he told a Cyprus News Agency (CNA) reporter over the phone shortly after his release.

According to the CNA, the former politician will be staying at a relative’s house in Athens. Per the terms of his release, he is still prohibited from leaving the country until a final judgment is issued in his case, which is pending appeal.

Michaelides is appealing a decision by a Greek court, which back in February sentenced him to 15 years in prison, having found him – and his son Michalis – guilty of bribery and fraud in laundering in relation to the purchase of Russian T-90-M1 anti-aircraft missiles by Greece during the term of Aksis Tsochatzopoulos as Greek defence minister.

According to online news portal “To Kouti tou Pandorou,” Michaelides was freed after successfully invoking a clause in the Greek penal code, under which inmates with a disability of up to 68% or more may request their release.

The relevant clause came into effect last April after amendments to the penal code. These were introduced by Greece’s Justice Minister Nikos Paraskevopoulos, amid criticism that they were purpose-made to enable the release of Savvas Xiros, a member of the 17 November terrorist organisation.

The same site reported that Michaelides, 81, was diagnosed with a disability of over 80 per cent, having been found to be suffering from a heart condition as well as visual and hearing impairment.

Massive illegal trapping in winter, 59 nets dismantled

The Committee Against Bird Slaughter (CABS) say that widespread bird-trapping is continuing on the island.

Prior to Christmas, CABS deployed two teams of ornithologists the Lamaca and Famagusta district to document the amount and impact of songbird poaching in December.

During field inspections and spot checks with the police a total of 59 large mist nets, 27 electronic bird callers as well as 147 mistnets were found and dismantled. In Cape Pyla and Agios Nikolaos, the British military police arrested two poachers as a result of CABS field investigations inside the SBA area.

Despite national and international ban on trapping a plate with cooked songbirds is still seen as a traditional “delicacy” by many locals on Cyprus, not only blackcaps, but later in the season also thrushes.

The birds are also served during the festive season thus fuelling illegal trapping of ‘fresh’ birds in December, CABS said.

According to the Game and Fauna Service illegal trapping and selling of the protected birds is a widespread and big business with an estimated turnover of 15 million Euros per year.

Most Greeks pessimistic about national economy in 2016

A poll has shown that most Greek citizens were pessimistic and anxious about their country’s economic situation in 2016.

According to an opinion survey published on the Greek newspaper Real News recently, up to 81.4% of the respondents said they were pessimistic about the country’s course in the New Year.

In addition, 65% of the participants of the survey, which was conducted by polling firm MRBI, expected the Greek economic situation to get worse, while 51% of them predicted a year of decline for their own households.

As to the Greek debt crisis that has blighted the country and the eurozone for several years, 42.8% and 32.4% of those surveyed expressed anxiety and anger respectively, said the poll.

In contrast, only about 30% of the respondents showed positive sentiments, like hope, confidence, pride and certainty, in the survey.

A drowned toddler became the first refugee victim in 2016 after a Greece-bound boat which he was aboard capsized off the Greek coast of Anastasious in the Aegean Sea while en route from Turkey, the Greek Coast Guard announced on Sunday.

The rubber dinghy carrying 40 people crashed onto rocks amid adverse weather conditions on Saturday, local authorities said.

Greek Cypriots provide power to Turkish Cypriots

In a gesture of solidarity with Turkish Cypriots, the government owned Electricity Authority provided power to the northern part of Cyprus which was faced with a blackout, a statement by the Transmission System Operator (TSO) said over the weekend.

TSO said in the statement that the Turkish Cypriots made a request for electricity late on New Year’s Day (Friday) after a fault put out of operation their power producing facility.

Provision of electricity to the northern part of Cyprus was continuing past Saturday afternoon.

The northern part set up its separate power producing station in 1983.

It was a happy coincidence that the electricity grids of the two parts of Cyprus were made compatible just recently as a confidence building measure decided by Cyprus’ President Nicos Anastasiades and Turkish Cypriot leader Mustafa Akinci.

They have been engaged in negotiations aimed at a solution of the Cyprus problem for the past eight months. They both said they hope to achieve a breakthrough in the coming months.

Countdown begins to “Pafos 2017”

Efforts are being stepped up this year as Paphos prepares to be the European Capital of Culture for 2017, Yiannis Koutsolampros, a member of the board of the organisation “Pafos 2017” told the Cyprus News Agency.

The countdown for the big cultural event has started, Koutsolampros said, noting that 2016 would be a very important year as part of that.

“Pafos 2017,” he said, was as important as the EU Presidency and Cyprus as a whole, would “benefit tremendously”.

The projects that will be ready by 2017, he said, were the integration of the coastal Promenade with Othello, the reconstruction of the shopping centre and the restoration of Ibrahim Khan.

Koutsolampros said that the programme for the 2017 events was ready. The official launch event will take place in late January next year and will be followed by 300 other cultural events.

Jamie Oliver opening restaurant in Cyprus

Internationally-renowned British celebrity chef Jamie Oliver is set to open a restaurant in Cyprus and has already invited sector professionals to apply for a position at the new eatery.

According to an online ad for a Head Chef “Jamie’s Italian will be launched in Cyprus by Avantage B&I Italian Restaurants Ltd that is related to Lyanproco Iacono and PHC Franchised Restaurants Public Ltd. the leader in Cyprus Restaurants. Cafes and Catering Industry with more than 90 outlets all over the island.”

The leaders of the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities of Cyprus, currently engaged in negotiations aimed at reunifying the eastern Mediterranean island, have said the cost of the solution has been estimated at between 25 billion euros and 30 billion euros. Turkish Cypriot media reported before the new year Nicos Anastasiades, the internationally recognized President of the Cyprus Republic, acting as leader of the Greek Cypriot community, and Turkish Cypriot leader Mustafa Akinci, told Turkish channel CNN Turk that the cost of solution is one of the major problems.

But they added that they believe it will be solved.

The estimated cost of the solution is almost two times the current 17.5 billion-euro annual GDP of Cyprus.

The two community leaders gave separate interviews to the channel, but they replied to identical questions.

This followed an unprecedented joint appearance by Anastasiades and Akinci at Cyprus state television on Christmas Day, addressing identical greetings to Christian Orthodox Greeks, Cypriots and Muslim Turkish Cypriots.

But it should be noted that despite decades of confrontation, religion has never been an issue between the two communities.

Akinci said that it will take an international effort to apply an eventual solution and to find the money needed to pay compensation to people deprived of their properties.

About 170,000 Greek Cypriots are still living as internally displaced people and consider themselves as refugees inside their country.

Many foreign ministers have come here and discussed the issue of financing a solution.

We have empowered (United Nations special emissary) Espen Barth Eide to discuss the issue of funding the solution with the IMF,” said Akinci.

Anastasiades said the financial aspect of a solution will be one of the problems.

“Not to believe that it will not be an obstacle to the solution we are trying to reach,” he said.

The cost of a solution was one of the factors which caused Greek Cypriots to vote against a solution plan proposed by the United Nations in 2004.

Akinci said that for Turkish Cypriots the most important aspect of a solution is the political equality of the two communities in a federal state.

He added that the priority for Greek Cypriots is the abolition of international guarantors by Britain, Greece and Turkey, put in force when Cyprus became independent in 1960, and the return of as much as possible territory to Greek Cypriots.

Cost of Cyprus solution may reach 30 billion euro

Finance Minister Harris Georgiades said in an article on Sunday that as Cyprus would in three months or so be exiting the bailout programme, it was time for a sober and frank assessment in order “to never again find ourselves in the same hopeless situation.”

In the article published in Politis, Georgiades said the first lesson of the crisis was the consequence of procrastinating in taking decisions either because of “ideological rigidities” or due to timidity both of which bring “incalculable costs to the economy and citizens.”

“The refusal to reform, and the passive monitoring of deteriorating economic indicators have cost our economy billions. These losses are being repaid by the taxpayer and have deprived society in its entirety,” he said.

The second lesson, he said was that “easy and rapid enrichment is not a healthy model for development.”

“The thoughtless development and lack of respect for the environment are an example to avoid. On the other hand, the sustainable revitalisation of the property sector, sustainable tourism development, the utilisation of prospects for renewable energy sources, a qualitative shift in the services sector, especially in investment in knowledge and expertise, can be the basis for a new, healthier growth model,” he added.

The third lesson, Georgiades said was that financial institutions are obliged to responsibly manage the money that deposits entrust to them.

“Effective supervision and proper corporate governance are necessary and obvious requirements,” he said. “In Cyprus neither were deprived of their properties.

...and in the Lord’s love and honour.

Wishing you a blessed and peaceful new year with health, happiness and all the best in your lives. May Lord Jesus Christ who is the Leader and Master of this New Year as well provide peace and His blessing to all of us, young and old. Every New Year provides something new, something original, optimistic and hopeful to man. "Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth" (Apoc. 21:2).

A new year is given to us by the love of God. Our Lord invites us all in a campaign of love, humanity and concord amongst ourselves and our fellow human beings. Getting strength and love from His immense love, let us embrace our fellow human beings. Let us all agree existentially that we are all brothers under His fatherly love. Let us all enjoy and savour the inner joy, peace and tranquillity with which we are graced by the presence and blessing of God. Within the life of the Church we can be reborn and enjoy spiritual fulfillment and the completion that we persistently but vainly seek in impassable and harmful paths for our soul. St Gregory of Nyssa said that human nature is "the most honoured in all visible creation". God has endowed man with the wish for virtue, immortality and justice (On the Construction of Man).

Today, apart from New Year’s Day, we are also celebrating Jesus Christ’s circumcision in human body, a feast which reveals His divine love and condescension. "Condescending on the race of men, the Saviour did not forsook circumcision" (Hymn of the Feast). Also today, we are celebrating the memory of Basil the Great who ‘urg’d the coexistence of all creatures with God’ (Hymn of the feast). Let me stress that faith in the Triune God, prayer and frequent churchgoing comprise the fundamental existential component of our Christian identity.

The election and respect towards the institution of the Family and love for Education and Church are necessary for the preservation and propagation of the Orthodox Christian Spirit and Tradition.

Let the New Year ‘beloved brothers and children in the Lord, the rich for us to escape from the sinful goal of our selfishness. Let it be the beginning of our surpassing our individuality and walking the same path along with our brethren, Jesus Christ, the God who became Man, will provide the hope for the brotherhood of the progeny of the Godhead, the bestowal of honour and respect to human life. With the advent of the new year, let us wish for the clash of weapons and the din of the battle to cease in the Middle East and for the ‘peace across the entire world’ to prevail (St. Chrysostom).

Looking forward to an optimistic future, dearly beloved in the Lord, let us continue our lives with optimism and courage, in the faith, in hope, in love and faith in the Lord will prevail. Only God is our true support, our only hope that provides us with clarity, apathy, serenity and aloneness from all evil and reinforces ‘being in resemblance of’ our Creator (On the Construction of Man). This is the message and motto for the year 2016.

Wishing you a blessed and peaceful New year with health, happiness, progress in your lives and the blessing of our Saviour Jesus Christ who was born in Bethlehem in Judea, I remain in the Lord’s love and honour.

NEW YEAR’S MESSAGE FROM THE CONSERVATIVE MP FOR BARNET

Theresa VILLIERS: “Much will depend on Ankara for the solution in 2016”

Theresa VILLIERS, MP for Chipping Barnet, has issued the following New Year message on matters relating to Cyprus and her British Cypriot constituents: “As the holiday season comes to an end and we consider the year ahead, it is a good time to consider the prospects for a negotiated settlement in Cyprus.

There has been optimism in recent months that President Nicos Anastasiades and Turkish Cypriot leader, Mustafa Akinci, are two leaders who have the ability and determination to deliver progress. Both of them have a long track record of advocating a settlement. President Anastasiades continues to offer the minimal proposable proposals aimed at delivering a workable and durable solution to reunite Cyprus. We all hope that a breakthrough might be possible over the course of 2016, but, as ever, much will depend on whether Ankara is prepared to let Cypriots decide their future for themselves.

Some good news to start the New Year wish is the very positive working relationship between the UK and Cyprus Governments. The two administrations have a common approach on a range of issues and hopefully 2016 will provide further opportunities to work together on important shared goals.

Back home in Barnet, I welcome the fact that British Cypriot businesses run by the Cypriot community in my constituency and around London. The UK is the joint fastest growing major developed economy in the world, with low interest rates, record low inflation, falling unemployment and rising wages, the Conservative Government’s long term economic plan is working.

I would expect to see continued success stories in 2016 from businesses run by the Cypriot community in my constituency and around London. Every month that London’s large and flourishing Cypriot community will play a significant role in the elections coming up this year for the Mayor and Greater London Assembly. British Cypriots are a crucial part of our community in the capital and it is important that their voice is heard in the decision on who will be the next Mayor of London. I hope as many as possible will back Conservative candidate, Zac Goldsmith, but the most important thing of all is that British Cypriots take part in the debate, get involved in the election, and turn out to vote.”

We would like to invite you to our NATO AGM which will take place on Sunday 31 January at 4pm at the Cypriot Brotherthood, 2 Britannia Rd, London N12 9RU.

Apply for Committee positions including the officer roles of PRESIDENT, VICE PRESIDENT and TREASURER.

Magra Carta (1297)

Magnus Carta (1297)

The Magna Carta was a legal charter that asserted the rights of the English people and limited the powers of the king. It contained provisions for the protection of the rights of individuals, the rule of law, and the separation of powers. The Magna Carta has been used as a fundamental document for the development of the law requiring open and public decision-making that can be reviewed by an appellate court. Indeed, the Magna Carta laid the foundation for modern legal systems, including the United States Constitution.

The Magna Carta was signed in 1215 by King John of England and is considered one of the most important legal documents in history. It is a symbol of the triumph of the rule of law over the arbitrary use of power by the monarchy.

The Magna Carta’s principle of the “substantive rule” has been applied in various jurisdictions around the world. It has been used as a basis for the development of constitutional law, where the rights of individuals and the protection against governmental overreach are safeguarded.

The Magna Carta has been reprinted in various editions, translations, and formats to make its principles accessible to a wider audience. The Magna Carta is a testament to the enduring power of the rule of law and the importance of protecting individual rights against governmental abuse.

The Magna Carta’s influence can be seen in various aspects of modern legal systems. It has inspired legislatures and policymakers to create laws that protect individual rights and limit the arbitrary powers of government. The Magna Carta’s legacy is evident in the protection against unreasonable searches and seizures, the right to a fair trial, and the prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment.

The Magna Carta is a reminder of the importance of the rule of law, the protection of individual rights, and the balance between governmental power and individual freedom. It serves as a beacon for future generations to uphold the principles of justice and fairness in their legal systems.

Ασταμάτητος και το 2016 ο Ολυμπιακός

Δεν κατάλαβα ποτέ το Ολυμπιακός
και συνεχίζει στην α' έκταση που έχει.
Την ίδια σημείωση που έκανε ο Ιωάννης Παπαδόπουλος, ο Πάππος Πάππος Παπαδόπουλος έκανε στην ιστοσελίδα του στον Ιούλιο του 2018. Στην α' έκταση του Ολυμπιακού, η ομάδα κατάφερε να καταλάβει τον έλεγχο του αγώνα, να παίξει καλά και να παράσχει έναν διάσημο ποδοσφαιρικό έμφαση.

Τέτοιο το λεγόμενο "μαγικό τοιχόστημα" ο Τσίπρας πιάστηκε και είδαν από την αρχή της διάρκειας του αγώνα τον Παναθηναϊκό να παίζει καλά και να παράσχει έναν διάσημο ποδοσφαιρικό έμφαση.

Το ισχυρό το ποδοσφαιρικό τοπίο αυτό κατάφερε να μεταφέρει την εντυπωσιακή απόδειξη της έντασης στο διάσημο έμφαση που παρέμεινε στον αγώνα και στην παράδοση των αντίπαλων ομάδων.

Leicester's Toast to Safety

There were only three games for the first Sunday of the New Year but champions Salamina supplied enough goals for a full programme. They ran riot with the highest score of the season defeating Achna 13-2 in the Challenge Cup, while Tripimeni-Olympia left it late to beat Apoel 2-1 and go through to the next round.

In Division Two Acha held Komi Kebir 1-1 to stay in the hunt for promotion.

Salamina’s players answered all the questions whether their extended Xmas festivities would affect their performance on the pitch. They wasted no time in imposing themselves on struggling Achna from Division Two by cruising to a 6-0 half-time lead.

Achna just capitulated as Kyri Portou helped himself to five goals and not far behind was Richard Georgiou with four goals. The others came from Deriz, Harrison Georgiou, Luke and Steve Valenta.

Achna’s efforts did not go unomitted as they scored twice with Alex Chrysianthou and Chris Spyrou.

The first has already taken its toll on the team — fatigue. The stronger teams in the Premier League usually prosper in the second half of the season. Considering also that Leicester have the highest average of tackles and interceptions per game explain why Ranieri’s side are able to effectively progress play from defense to attack.

The mild weather will help as there are no backlog of matches and so we see the season finishing quite early. This will avoid Salamina of having to play mid week games and all their efforts will be concentrated on Sunday matches. It would be a great achievement for a Kopa club to reach the FA of the Sunday Trophy. Brotherhood, Tripimeni Olympia and Aranouts are in the chasing position while Livadia and Apoel have shown promise. Promoted KLM and Maronites are finding it tough with the latter sheeping over 60 goals in the first half of the season almost as many as EKOL back in 1975. Elsewhere it’s good to see Centrikaya sort their early problems and continue their programme.

In Division two we have had a good first half despite having only six teams in the division. New comers St. Pantelimon made an excellent start to their Kopa career taking the division by storm to lead into the New Year. Komi Kebir of course can reclaim top spot with their games in hand. They have had an unbelievable run for almost a year making themselves favourites for promotion. All the other teams Asha, Arachne, Pantel and Achna have shown improvement to suggest we will have a very exciting and competitive second half of the season.
