Presidential Cypriot FM: No fly rights to illegal Tymbou

President of the Republic Nicos Anastasiades has assured that his Government will do all that is humanly possible to alleviate the impact of the Eurogroup Agreement.

In an address at the 8th Cyprus – Russian Festival held at Latsia, President Anastasiades referred to the relations between the two countries noting that “we are delighted by the natural affinity shared between Cypriots and Russians.” “Affinity between our peoples is a symbolic emblem of our relations, relations that have proven resilient and durable even when tried and tested through the unprecedented dire economic situation which Cyprus currently faces”, he added, according to an official announcement issued here today.

In this respect, he continued, “it is pertinent to address our Russian friends present here and convey to them wholeheartedly and share their understandable bitterness and apprehension caused by the coercive manner with which the Eurogroup Agreement was imposed on my Government.”

President said that he was also fully aware “of the difficulties they are facing, as well as the financial losses they have suffered”, adding that “it is for these reasons that I wish to assure you that as a State, and, particularly, as a Government, we will do all that is humanly possible to alleviate, to the greatest extent possible, the impact of the Eurogroup Agreement, especially as regards the compensation of part of the losses which shareholders of banks, holders of debt securities and depositors have suffered.”

He said that “this is all the more applicable in order to demonstrate our friendly feelings, gratitude and recognition of your valuable contribution to Cyprus and its economy.”

President also expressed his satisfaction and gratitude “for the vote of confidence, trust and faith which the vibrant Russian community residing in Cyprus, as well as the Russian Business Community, has since the Eurogroup Agreement been displaying to Cyprus and its economic and banking system.”

“In this turn demonstrates that the principle of solidarity will continue to characterize the relations between our two countries and also proves that, contrary to unfounded rumours circulating in specific directions, Cyprus and Russia will continue to enjoy a mutually beneficial partnership in a manner which has a prosperous future”, he noted.

Referring to the Festival, he said that “the fact that this Festival is being held for the 8th consecutive year, attracts each year more than 10,000 people, manifests that it has become a familiarised traditional festivity in the hearts of both Russians and Cypriots and one through which our solid bonds of friendship are clothed.”

As he said, “by celebrating the aspects of the rich culture and traditions of our peoples, we reaffirm the deep-rooted quality of everything that unites us. Your prolific presence here provides more than ample attestation to this fact.”

He added that “our cooperation is a long-standing partnership at all levels and in all fields: a partnership founded on concrete and deeply-entrenched historical, political, cultural and religious ties.” “This is a partnership”, he continued, “greatly valued by the Government and the people of Cyprus and one that we actively aim to upgrade even further. My presence here is tangible proof of my Government’s commitment to further the partnership to new escales.”

At the same time, he concluded, “for many of our Russian friends, Cyprus has become your second home, while for many Cypriots your ties with Russia go far beyond business and entrepreneurial activities, embracing your cultural, sporting and religious ties in a magnificently diverse and rich-in-heritage country.”

There has been no discussion on a possible return of the Turkish occupied fenced-off town of Famagusta to its legal inhabitants in exchange for allowing direct flights to and from the illegal Tymbou airport, in Cyprus’ northern occupied areas, Foreign Minister Ioannis Kasoulides has said. This issue is not under discussion, he told CNA in an interview, adding that the Greek Cypriot side has never raised such an issue.

“Right now what we have is our proposal on this issue, which we believe will help the talks significantly if Famagusta is returned to its legal citizens. Once other issues come up we will look into them,” he added.

The Foreign Minister said that talks on the Cyprus problem will not resume from the beginning, adding that it will be made clear that the Greek Cypriot side is not bound by positions which President Nicos Anastasiades has already said he does not subscribe to, on the basis of the principle that nothing is agreed until everything is agreed.

With regard to the situation in Turkey, the Foreign Minister said that the EU must be concerned about the reasons of this unrest in relation to the social level of Turkey as a candidate country for EU membership. Asked about the credibility of Alexander Downer, UN Secretary General’s Special Advisor on Cyprus, Kasoulides cautioned against public comments on the matter.

Replying to another question on possible personal interest in his past for the post of EU Cyprus Commissioner, the Minister pointed out that his priority now is to contribute in the best way he can to the success of President Anastasiades’ government.

Asked about his recent visit to Paris, he said he reaffirmed the high level of bilateral relations, ahead of a visit President Anastasiades will pay next week to Paris.

On the case of the occupied town of Varosha (fence off area of Famagusta), on the east, the Minister said it was too early to discuss confidence building measures with regard to the return of the fenced-off town of Famagusta to its legal citizens.

He described any such possible move return of Varosha as a way to bridge the huge gap of confidence that exists between the two sides. He referred to past attempts by Turkey to operate flights to and from Tymbou airport, which did not succeed. “Right now what we have is our proposal on this issue, which we believe will help the talks significantly if Famagusta is returned to its legal citizens. Once other issues come up we will look into them,” he added.

Asked about his forthcoming visit to London, Kasoulides said that he was invited by his British counterpart William Hague to a working lunch on Monday June 17, adding that they will hold talks on the Cyprus problem, bilateral relations and European issues.

On possible Turkish Cypriot participation in the European Parliament, the Foreign Minister said we are against the status of observers but we are in favour of Turkish Cypriot participation in the European elections in Cyprus. During previous Ledras visits he reviewed all of them but that was their choice. They were offered this possibility, through constitutional changes.

Asked about the exploitation in the region, Kasoulides said hydrocarbons in the Mediterranean sea will certainly bring together Lebanon, Egypt and Israel, adding that Cyprus will also contribute to this. He noted that all countries have the legal right to reap the benefits of their Exclusive Economic Zones.

The Greek public broadcaster ERT closed down almost immediately Tuesday midnight after the government announcement, causing shockwaves across the country. Three TV channels, several radio stations and the internet stopped operating. The government said a new restructured public service would be up and running by the 29th August.
The EU will support Cyprus’s recovery effort

The EU will support Cyprus’s recovery effort, head of the European Commission Office in Cyprus Georgios Markopoulou has said. Markopoulou was addressing an event at Neapolis University in Pafos, on a new growth model for Cyprus, which was organised jointly by the Neapolis University of Cyprus, the European Parliament in Cyprus and the Press and Information Office of the Republic in cooperation with the Eurogroup and the EU Commission. Markopoulou said that 16 April 2013 marks the start of a new model for Cyprus as per the terms of the 2012 agreement, in which the EU will provide a total of 10 billion euros as part of the €18 billion euro package. Markopoulou stressed the need to accelerate the process of implementing the EU and IMF’s recovery programme.

IMF admits mistakes on Greece bailout

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has admitted that it made mistakes in handling Greece’s first international bailout. The IMF said it was too optimistic in its growth assumptions and said a debt restructuring should have been considered earlier.

Greece was granted a 10bn euro (989bn) bailout by the IMF and EU in May 2010. An additional 2bn euro rescue package was approved in February 2012.

Greece’s first bailout came amid fears the country would default on its debts and that it could spark a disorderly exit from the eurozone.

The IMF has now released a study looking at the handling of the programme. It admitted that it botched its own rules on exceptional access for the programme to go ahead.

To justify exceptional access, one of the four criteria that must be met is that public debt is sustainable in the medium term.

But the IMF said “even with implementation of agreed policies, uncertainties were so significant that staff were unable to reach that public debt was sustainable with high probability.”

The task force also reviewed the criterion under which debt was not sustainable with high probability, “high risk of international spillover effects provided an additional justification.”

The IMF’s report said that it has been unsuccessful in implementing measures to curb fare-dodging on Athens public transport, in order to avoid raising fares. The decision was made at a meeting chaired by the general secretary for transport Nikos Stathopoulos.

The IMF said that fare increases can be avoided and would in all cases be less than the 25 percent called for in bailout agreements.

Markopoulou referred to the establishment of a special task force which will work in cooperation with Cypriot authorities to ensure, as he said, that EU funding will be directed in areas where it will be most effective.

The task force will also offer technical know-how to EU-IMF austerity recipe that the Washington-based fund says it sharply misjudged has left rows of shattered stores and many squaring for scraps of food in trash cans.

“Really? Thanks for letting us know but we can’t forgive you,” said Apostolos Triaikinos, a 59-year old garbage collector and a father of two.

“Let’s not fool ourselves. They’ll never give us anything back. I’m sorry for all the people who killed themselves because of austerity. How are we going to bring them back? How?”

The IMF acknowledged that it underestimated the damage done to Greece’s economy from spending cuts and tax hikes imposed in a bailout, which was accompanied by one of the worst economic collapses ever experienced by a country in peacetime.

A report looking back on the bailout said the Fund veered from its own standards to overestimate how much debt Greece could bear, and should have pushed harder and sooner for private lenders to take a “haircut” to reduce Greece’s debt burden.

Prime Minister Antonis Samaras told reporters the acknowledgement justified his positions. He had criticised from the outset “what the IMF has called mistakes.”

“We have been correcting those mistakes over the past year,” Samaras told reporters during a visit to Helsinki.

The IMF said “the IMF admits to the crime,” the letter Argos newspaper declared on its front page.

“Let’s not fool ourselves. They’ll never give us anything back. I’m sorry for all the people who killed themselves because of austerity. How are we going to bring them back? How?”

The best time to invest in Cyprus is now

BY THEODORE PANAYOTOU

From the ashes of its economic collapse, Cyprus is emerging as one of the best destinations for value investing.

Because of its economic troubles as a result of its large banking sector, its exposure to Greek debt, and its exposure to the euro, the Cyprus economy has been downgraded by the rating agencies and put under a Eurozone bailout programme. The unprecedented haircut of bank deposits over 100,000 created a bitter taste and hurt the country's reputation as a regional financial centre.

All these sound bad, but in every adversity there is an opportunity, and in Cyprus there are not a few. First of all, both the overblown banking sector and the government were claiming the lion's share of resources and attention and dis- torted the economy by being cut down to size. The real economy, and the private sector are at last re-ceiving the attention they deserve.

There is a genuine interest in promoting innovation and entrepreneurship and in attracting direct foreign investment to the real economy rather than just to the bank deposits and "offshore", "virtu- al" or "fictitious" companies.

Labour costs have fallen and will continue to do so for a while under the pressure of 15 per cent per annum among the young, unemployment. The power of the labour unions has been steadily reduced by the crisis and the mem- orandum with the troika; closed jobs are being opened up and the flexibility of labour market is be- ing increased.

Government bureaucracy is be- ing cut and procedures streamlined to reduce the delays and cost of public services to the private sector. As a result, there is a real reform and modernisation of the public service part of the mem- orandum signed with the troika.

A study of how best to do it is currently underway under way by the World Bank with input from the British government, which un- dertakes similar reforms. The se- mipublic organisations and lumbering state enterprises are in the process of being closed or priva- tised. A new breeze of healthy competi- tion is blowing and this is on- ly beginning.

There is a new pro-business gov- ernment in power which, though populist and occasionally containment by the memorandum with the troi- ka, is making genuine efforts to attract foreign investments with generous incentives including a tax on more modern real estate prices have fallen steadily in the past two years and are now 20-30 per cent lower than they were two to three years ago. Correspondingly, rents have dropped and further 25-35 per cent reductions are being debated in parliament. The virtu- ally impossibility of securing a loan from Cypriot banks today means that the real estate market is and will continue to be soft for a while and that there can be good op- portunities for those who have cash or have access to borrowing from other sources. The large number of non-serviced loans, loans in de- fault or inadequately secured loans means that the supply of attrac- tively priced land will increase in the near future.

The cost of electricity which was just about the highest in Eu- rope has begun to fall (8 per cent in the last couple of months) and is expected to be further reduced as a result of the forthcoming priv- atisation of the Electricity Authority. Shortage, increased use of natural gas and renewable energy, es- pecially solar, which is actually be- ing promoted and supported by the government. There is also a growing interest in investing in en- ergy conservation through retrofi- tting and efficient new building design with expected savings of much more competitive prices.

A yet another opportunity open- ing up is for business angels and venture capitalists looking for in- novative start-up opportunities for penetrating global markets. It is here that foreign direct investment, accompanied by access to tech- nology management, and R&D in partnership with local firms, can open up many profitable oppor- tunities, perhaps in the long term.

The first, Cyprus is already do- ing as far as its compliance with the terms of its bailout. The re- forms under way are expected to result in a leaner and more agile public sector; a more open and flexible labour market; and a more outward-looking and competitive business environment. Applica- tion of high levels of technology and management skills in the new products and services will add the level of quality, sophistication and differentiation required for penetrating global markets. Dr Linda Papadopoulos has been appointed as ambassador for children’s campaign in Britain

A campaign that encourages parents to set aside time to play with their children has appointed Dr Linda Papadopoulos as ambassador. She will be a spearhead throughout the year for the Make Time 2 Play campaign, which is a long-standing initiative run by the British Toy and Hobby Association (BTHA). It also aims to help parents understand the “vital” role that play has in developing healthy childhoods.

Dr Papadopoulos is a counselling psychologist well-known for her work on children’s issues and the effects of media and societal change on kids’ social and emotional development.

“As a parent as well as a psychologist, I recognise the time pressures that are on both parents and children. Sometimes, in our attempt to create fulfilled and rewarding childhoods for our children, we can overlook that basic ingredient for a happy child: play,” she commented. “Children need space and time to work through the life skills they are developing every day, and play enables this. But also, like all of us, children sometimes just need a break, so I’m completely supportive of the Make Time 2 Play campaign and what it stands for. And I look forward to exploring different themes over the coming year.”

Natasha Crookes from the BTHA commented: “We are delighted to have Dr Papadopoulos join us on our campaign. Although the basic argument is a simple one, there are a number of more complex issues that arise when discussing play, and we’re confident we have an ambassador that can help us discuss those issues in depth, but with the clarity of vision that she brings to all of the issues that she tackles.”

Maria Alambritis Joins top art gallery

A Greek Cypriot postgraduate has this month finished her postgraduate studies and is going straight into a crucial role at one of Britain’s top art galleries. Maria Alambritis followed up on her first class honours degree in the History of Art at UEA with a master’s degree at the prestigious Courtauld Institute. Maria starts in full time work at the Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery this week after just having finished her studies. The position Maria has successfully applied for is supported by the Heritage Lottery Fund. It is an Art Curator Traineeship and Maria will receive training in her specialist field in a range of skills common to entry level curatorial posts.

The Birmingham Art Gallery is known for having one of the largest collections of works by the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. Maria’s dissertation for her Masters degree was on one of those artists of Greek descent namely, Marie Spartali.

Maria Alambritis was the youngest daughter of Michael Spartali who was a wealthy merchant and the principal of the firm Spartali & Co and Greek consul-general based in London in the 1860’s. Marie Spartali had a sixty year career during which she produced one hundred works exhibited in Great Britain and the United States. She and her two cousins were collectively known as the Three Graces, after the Charities of Greek Mythology (Aglaia, Euphrosyne and Thalia) as all three were noted beauties of Greek Heritage.

Commenting on her progress, Maria’s father, Cllr Stephen Alambritis, said: “We are so proud of her achievements to date. We spent a day in Birmingham back in April of this year to coincide with her interviews and we thought nothing of it given that Maria was one of over 200 applicants for this job. So it was a real surprise when they called back to say Maria had got the job”.

Cll Alambritis concluded: “We believe her dissertation on Marie Spartate, arguably the greatest Greek female artist of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, was instrumental in helping Maria get this exciting role”.

PM: Greece in the constellation of recovery

Greeks Prime Minister Antonis Samaras said that Greece is in the constellation just before recovering from its New Democracy (ND) party Central Macedonia pre-congress, held in Thessaloniki.

“Disagreements exist in the three-party coalition government” he said referring to IMF’s mistake Samaras said that “we had pointed out the mistakes from the first memorandum, but now it is too late and it’s no good looking back”. Samaras said that “the neonazi are the only black spot of the ND party Central Macedonia pre-congress, held in Thessaloniki.”

We’re going to be doing quite a lot. It’s going to take some time. I can’t wait,” he said making the announcement.

Supreme Court rejects appeals against “haircut” on bank deposits

The Supreme Court rejected on Friday appeals against a government decision to impose a “haircut” on uninsured banking deposits in the context of a 10 billion euro bailout.

The Court plenary ruled by majority vote that the “haircut” does not constitute a public act but a private act and as such it can be examined in civil lawsuits against the banks and possibly the government. Under the bailout agreement, uninsured deposits (over 100,000 euros) in the island’s largest bank, Bank of Cyprus, will take losses up to 60% whereas Cyprus Popular Bank, Cyprus’ second largest lender, will be liquidated with its uninsured deposits estimated to lose up to 86% in a bid to cover the banks’ capital needs, amounting to 10.6 billion euros. Following the decision, approximately 5,000 depositors appealed to the Supreme Court, requesting that the decision be revoked.

The Court said that since the bank’s contractual obligations were affected, depositors could launch civil lawsuits against the bank in the district courts, while those proceedings may be extended against the Republic which issued the Decree that affected the banks’ capacity to repay their deposits.

Commenting on the decision, both Attorney General Petros Clerides and Alecos Evaggelou, the Central Bank’s legal advisor, said the ruling enables this. But also, like all of us, children sometimes just need a break, so I’m completely supportive of the Make Time 2 Play campaign and what it stands for. And I look forward to exploring different themes over the coming year.”

Ο καθηγητής και ο ανθρώπος Κύριος

Το επίγειο έργο του Κύριου Χριστού για τη σωτηρία των ανθρώπων διέρρηκε τρία μόνο χρόνια. Εξετάστηκε σε συνεχιστική μεταβίωση του Χριστού, δηλαδή έτσι έγινε από τον Χριστό η Ζωή Νεκράς Του, άνευ ικανοτήτων, έπειτα από την επιμορφωτική Μετάβασή του, έτσι ώστε να αποκτήσει στις ουσίες της ζωής της εικόνα του άνθρωπου Κύριου Χριστού.

γ) Η Ανανέωση του Κύριου Χριστού, ο οποίος μετέτρεψε το Κέρατο σε Πέτρα, και τον τάφο στο ζωόντα άτομο. Η ανανέωση τον έκανε πάλι να είναι άρρητος, μέσω της αναγέννησης του Χριστού.

ΜΕΡΟΣ ΕΝΔΕΚΑΤΩΝ

Σκοπός της Σπουδομονής είναι να ενισχύσει τον αξονικότητα των ιδιών, την εκπαίδευση της ειδικότητας και την επικοινωνία των νέων με τους ερασιτέχνες των ιδίων, ώστε να ενεργοποιηθούν τα σχέδια τους την κατάρτιση και την εκμάθηση, τόσο για την εκπαίδευση της ειδικότητας, όσο και για την εκπαίδευση της απασχόλησης.

Στην εποχή που δεν είχε ακόμη σχεδιάσει τον προορισμό του ιδίου, η ίδρυση της Σπουδομονής υπήρξε ένας άξονας στην πορεία της εκπαίδευσης της ειδικότητας και της απασχόλησης. Οι αναπτυσσόμενοι κινδύνοι δεν έφεραν μόνο στην εκπαίδευση της ειδικότητας, αλλά και στην επιστημονική και την ανέπαφη δράση της ιδιώτης. Χάνοντας μέσα στον δρόμο της διαδοχής, δεν βλέπουν να έχουν μόνον την ευκαιρία να εκμάθουν την επιστημονική και την ανέπαφη δράση, αλλά και να επικοινωνήσουν με τους ερασιτέχνες των ιδίων, μέσω της Σπουδομονής.”

Win for Takkas

Angelo Takkas won the Committee and Past Captains Competition which was held on Thursday 6th June at Knebworth Golf Club. Angelo played brilliant golf scoring 37 points claiming his first victory in this competition in a scorecard on countback from the ever improving Louis Leondis who had an amazing score of 22 points on the front nine with a slow score of 15 on the back nine. Attending this event were 16 committee and past captains. Angelo was Captain in 2005.

ELEFHERIA TOOLS
EDITED BY MICHAEL PIERI

Thursday 13th June 2013
The Cypriot League held their 38th AGM climaxing with a tense secret ballot to elect the Chairman for next season. It was like a sudden death penalty shootout or like so many games this season that had a dramatic finish. Once all the reports by all the officers were made. last year’s Chairman Lakis Chrysostomou stepped down and Life President and the first Chairman of KOPA Hambis Prodromou took over to oversee the election.

I can assure you it was not as smooth as this back in 1975!! Then we went into overtime!!!

Both the departing Chairman Lakis and the challenger Chris Yiannakka were given five minutes to address the delegates before a secret ballot took place. There was no question, both did well and had good ideas to continue and improve the good work KOPA has been doing for the community over the last 38 years. Yes, there are improvements needed but that goes with every aspect of life. I would have liked both Chris and Lakis to work together and for a moment I thought we were going to get a result in that form. However, and I think this was a deciding factor when Chris was asked if he would stay on, if he failed to obtain a winning margin, his reply was a blunt no. Whereas Lakis maintained he would continue to serve KOPA’s Committee.

I am sure Chris will continue to help and will be back just like his dad Apostolis. He has a lot of good ideas. It was now time for lunch.

Earlier we heard Secretary Michael Yiannakoumi who I think has done a tremendous job, read out a review of the season with some interesting statistics. There were no appeals to the LFA unlike old days which resulted in many disruptions. The main reason is the good work by the Registration Secretary on ID cards for players. Fixture Secretary Yianni Koumetou was also applauded for his work resulting in the satisfactory ending of all competitions. Interesting also was that 618 players were registered appx 31 per club with Arachne just 21, of which only three were non-Cypriot. Omonia on the other hand registered 50 players of which 38 were non-Cypriots.

Chairman Lakis Chrysostomou went through the targets and achievements for 2012/13.

I just want to make sure people do not underestimate what the KOPA Association has done for the Cypriot community. The whole Committee must be congratulated on the work they do for the League throughout the season.

Lack of spectators

We all know that we do not get the crowds at the games as we used to but that could be because of many reasons. A venue that is central with several pitches and better facilities could be one way of enticing supporters.

Youth teams

I am more concerned with the lack of young players coming into the league over the next few years. I know there are plenty of youngsters playing in other leagues but they are mainly under 15 etc and when they finish they are scattered. I would still like to see KOPA form a youth league of players say 16-18 under its umbrella just like we did in 1989. We then had six or eight clubs yielding over 100 players every couple of years that filtered into the senior clubs eventually.

With the additional sponsorships and KOPA’s financial support from Cyprus it should be easier for clubs to support this project thus getting continuity of playing personnel.

If we do not produce this influx of players, there will be more teams struggling to survive, leaving, say, half a dozen clubs who could operate with a decent squad of players.
